

You'll Have Me - DistroKid Lyrics

Two-ten in the morning
Your hand around my thumb
Trying to get your arm through a sleeve
Like I've never done it once

Two years took the memory
Of how small a body starts
How your neck needs both my hands
How a diaper gets this hard

You haven't learned a single word
There's nothing you can tell me
So I study every movement
Like there's something there to read

I wonder what comes easy
What the world will make you earn
What you'll carry from your brother
What you'll have to learn

You'll have me

Not a story
Not a name
Not a man you know from pictures
Or the things somebody saved

You'll have me

When the easy part runs out
I can't keep the hard away
But I can meet you where you are

Anything that comes for you
Comes through me first

I'm learning while I love you
What a father's meant to be

You won't have to wonder
You'll have me

Your mother and I came close
To never having this
Now your brother's down the hall
And you're breathing on my chest

I thought the second time around
I'd know just what to do
Turns out knowing how to hold one
Doesn't teach me how to hold you

Maybe that's the point of it
You don't arrive prepared
You just keep paying attention
And make sure that you're there

You don't need a man who made it
If he's never in the room
You need somebody you can interrupt

Who turns around for you

You'll have me

Not a story

Not a name

Not a man you know from pictures

Or the things somebody saved

You'll have me

When the easy part runs out

I can't keep the hard away

But I can meet you where you are

Anything that comes for you

Comes through me first

I'm learning while I love you

What a father's meant to be

You won't have to wonder

You'll have me

I know how easy it is

To think there's always time

One more thing that needs attention

One more minute passing by

So when you reach

I'll reach back

That's where I'll start

I don't need to know the answer

To know where you are

And someday when you don't reach

I'll still be close enough

No one taught me how to do this

Maybe showing up's enough

You'll have me

When the easy part runs out

I can't keep the hard away

But I can meet you where you are

You'll have me

I may never have the answers

I'm still learning what they mean

When you reach

I'll reach back

You'll have me
